ACOUSTIC GUITARS

FENDER ACOUSTIC GUITARS

Everywhere acoustic guitars are played, you'll recognize the Fender sound. That round, resonant sound.

But supremacy of sound is only part of the Fender acoustic story. They're easier to play. Each time your fingers strike the strings, you get an immediate full response. The strings are close to the fingerboard, so you don't have to strain a finger pressing them down. Strings are properly spaced so you can change chords faster and finger-pick easier. The neck is designed for easy chording and fretting. And fast action playing—or slow action, if that's your style. The heel has been removed, so your fingers can reach four additional frets up top.

And the body is designed to fit your body. Fender acoustics are beauties. High-gloss finish. Rosewood fingerboard. Decorative purfling and binding on most models. Hand crafted throughout.

Fender Acoustic Guitar Features

NECK

The unique-looking Fender neck has a very unusual feature: No Heel. This means you can now reach all those high notes you couldn't reach before. Or didn't want to because it was too hard.

An adjustable steel truss rod runs down the inside of the neck (from the first to last fret), reinforces the neck and keeps it from warping and bowing.

The Fender neck and fingerboard are designed for fast action playing: quick chord changing and easy fingering.

BRIDGE

On the Kingman and Palomino guitar models you'll find six individually adjustable bridge sections. Which means you can adjust each string, individually, for perfect pitch and playing action.

HEAD

Fender Guitars have a unique head design. You'll find machine heads that have been individually mounted and individually enclosed. Which means that if you want to replace one, you can. Without replacing a whole section.

BODY

The beautiful Fender guitar body has a thick-skin™ high-gloss finish that resists cracking from temperature changes. Decorative binding and inlaid purfling are found on the Kingman and Palomino guitar models. For those who take a little more pride in the way their guitars look.
